The beginning of the 2019-2020 season was filled with hope. Our community was ready to experience the immense potential of Senior Curatorial Director Eva Yaa Asantewaa’s first full year at the helm, with a stimulating season titled Walls Down!. In September, we completed the construction of our accessible elevator at 280 Broadway and finally welcomed everyone through one equitable entrance: the front door.

Soon after, we received the incredible news that Gibney Company would be expanding—doubling in size and commissioning a renowned slate of international choreographers—thanks to the generous support of Andrew A. Davis, a trustee of the Shelby Cullom Davis Charitable Fund. Potential across our Center, Community, and Company was palpable.

When we closed our doors on March 16 due to the COVID-19 pandemic, it was hard not to lose this hope. The world around us was quite literally changing by the minute, and artists—both near and far, emerging and established—were deeply hurting. Only two months later, the murder of George Floyd and the subsequent calls to action by the Black Lives Matter movement thrust organizational practices of transparency and anti-racism into the spotlight. The Gibney team faced these challenges with grace and determination, creating meaningful digital programming and ensuring our artists and community members received as many resources as we could sustainably offer.

It is no secret that the upcoming year will be just as challenging as the last. When we reopen our doors, everything will be different. It has to be. As we begin to recover, we have the opportunity to rebuild the field we have always wanted: one that is caring, resilient, and equitable. This chance to begin anew sustains our hope. Thank you for continuing to stay by our side as we “make space for dance” in new ways.

With gratitude and continued hope,

Gina Gibney

For 29 years, Gibney has tapped into the vast potential of movement, creativity, and performance to effect social change and personal transformation. Today, Gibney’s two Lower Manhattan locations annually engage over 45,000 individuals through its Center, Company, and Community Action initiatives.

Gibney began as a dance company dedicated to social action and has since evolved into a cultural leader operating 23 studios and five performance spaces across two New York City facilities. In 2010, Gibney was home to a single studio within the historic 890 Broadway in Union Square and had a budget of $500,000. After expanding to the entire fifth floor at 890 Broadway, the Department of Cultural Affairs invited Gibney to take on a second location at 280 Broadway in 2014. In 2018, the renovation of 10,000 square feet of previously underutilized space at 280 Broadway unveiled six new, high-tech studios and brought Gibney’s total physical footprint 55,000 square feet.

Throughout this profound growth, Gibney’s business model has leveraged earned income from studio rentals to sustain operations. This has allowed Gibney to embrace both the physical expansions and new program areas, including robust year-round presenting, professional training, artist services, and social justice initiatives.

With the onset of COVID-19 in March 2020, Gibney’s business model was upended. Without access to its space, Gibney could not utilize earned income to subsidize nonprofit programming. The organization quickly pivoted and began working on multiple fronts to create strategies to mitigate losses and shore up the organization. Gibney’s staff of incredible artists did what they do best—they innovated, creating new and meaningful programs for the artistic community, while simultaneously cutting down on expenses.

To have a break-even budget in a time of extraordinary challenge is a true accomplishment. Through the continued generosity of its Board of Directors, institutional funders, individual donors, and community, Gibney looks forward to furthering its mission while ensuring the long-term stability of the organization. The organization looks forward to welcoming the public back into its spaces and continuing to “Make Space for Dance,” now and always.

GIBNEY AT A GLANCE

MISSION
Gibney’s mission is to tap into the vast potential of movement, creativity, and performance to effect social change and personal transformation.

The mission comes to life through a stunning socially active COMPANY, impactful COMMUNITY action initiatives, and two thriving performing arts CENTERS.

COMPANY: Gibney Company is Gibney’s acclaimed resident dance ensemble whose members serve not only as performing artists, but also as activists and cultural advocates.

COMMUNITY: Gibney is at the forefront of mobilizing the arts to address social justice issues by working with survivors in shelters, youth in schools, and artists both on and off the stage.

CENTER: Gibney has emerged a cultural leader operating 55,000 square feet of space, including 23 studios and 5 performance spaces, across two Manhattan locations.
THE NEXT PHASE

1991
Gibney is founded with a single studio located in the historic building, 890 Broadway.

2012
Building on a successful earned income model, Gibney completes a 16,000 square foot expansion at 890 Broadway, taking on the entire fifth floor.

2014
At the City of New York’s request, Gibney renovers 25,000 square feet at 280 Broadway in Lower Manhattan through a tightly managed construction project, completed on budget and on time.

2018
Gibney unveils its NEXT PHASE SPACE: an additional 10,000 square foot renovation of previously underutilized space at 280 Broadway, making an additional 25,000 hours of annual workspace available to artists and launching a partnership with The Joyce Theater to make Studio W its exclusive three-year home.

2019
In September, Gibney completes the construction of its accessible elevator. The elevator connects the ground floor entrance at 53A Chambers Street with the second floor, addressing a pressing accessibility issue at 280 Broadway and allowing for new partnerships, residency opportunities, and integrated classes for artists and patrons with disabilities.

Major support for Gibney’s Next Phase Space has been provided by:
The City of New York & The Honorable Mayor Bill de Blasio; The New York City Council & The Honorable Speaker Corey Johnson; The New York City Council & the Honorable Speaker Melissa Mark-Viverito; The Honorable City Council Member Margaret Chin; The Honorable Manhattan Borough President Gale Brewer; The New York City Department of Cultural Affairs and The Honorable Tom Finkelpearl; New York State Council on the Arts with the support of Governor Andrew M. Mellon Foundation; LuEsther T. Mertz Charitable Trust; Jerome Robbins Foundation; The Scherman Foundation’s Katharine S. and Axel G. Rosin Fund; SHS Foundation, and The Agnes Varis Trust.

Major support has also been provided by SeaChange Partners, Altman Foundation, Mertz Gilmore Foundation, Suzanne Peck and Brian Friedman and Thompson Family Foundation.
BEYOND ACCESSIBILITY

To commemorate the elevator’s opening and the transformative impact of the disability artistry community on the New York City performing arts landscape, Gibney hosted Beyond Accessibility, a celebratory event featuring performances, film screenings, a dance party, and gallery exhibition—all by and for disabled artists.

A free public event in September 2019, Beyond Accessibility welcomed over 250 artists and audience members into the newly accessible Center. The event opened with a ceremonial ribbon cutting attended by Victor Calise, Commissioner of the Mayor’s Office for People with Disabilities, and Gale Brewer, Manhattan Borough President. The audience then watched film screenings by disabled artists Alice Sheppard and Carina Ho and were encouraged to explore the space, either enjoying the reception, witnessing Pelenakeke Brown and Yo-Yo Lin’s durational performance of Down in the River, or enjoying a dance party with DJ Kevin Gotkin.

Gibney also had the opportunity to welcome a new and diverse audience at the intersection of visual art and disability aesthetics through the display of a related art exhibit, My Body is the House that We Live In. Curated by Ezra Benus, this exhibit was available for public viewing at Gibney’s Center through October 10, 2019.

PERFORMANCES
PERFORMANCES

Gibney’s Presenting Program serves developing, mid-career, and established choreographers and offers them resources to create, grow, and present work rooted in the urgent socio-political discourse of today.

“It is a good time to examine the walls in our lives and world and ask, in all honesty, who and what they really serve. Walls Down!, my theme for Fall 2019 – Spring 2020, asks you to consider what walls you have built that keep you from seeing too far beyond the familiar and easy. What walls prevent you from seeing humanity in others and the expansive potential in yourself? Walls Down! asks the maker and witness of art to question stale assumptions, confront injustice, excite the mind and strengthen the heart with joy and hope. Are you ready? Let’s go.” - Eva Yaa Asantewaa, Senior Curatorial Director

COMMUNITY
COMMUNITY

Gibney Community activates the arts to address social justice issues. Community programs bring a range of social issues in the spotlight, with a focus on gender-based violence and its prevention. As a result, Gibney Community ignites dialogue, raises awareness, and forges long-lasting partnerships.

In response to the COVID-19 pandemic, Gibney Community quickly adapted programming and moved it online to meet young peoples’ current needs. Cecile Noel, Commissioner of the Mayor’s Office to End Domestic and Gender-Based Violence, shared: "In response to concerns about an increase of gender-based violence and cyberbullying during COVID-19, Gibney has made available digital content to continue supporting students and their social and emotional well-being, and to encourage dialogue around healthy relationships, by launching Moving Bodies + Moving Ideas: Healthy Relationships During COVID-19 and Beyond...Gibney’s new video series provides us with an opportunity to exercise and to grow and sustain healthy relationships during this challenging time."

Example of a Renter Spotlight
COVID-19

As soon as Gibney’s doors closed on March 16, 2020, the organization’s focus shifted to ensure that it could be there for its staff, artists, audiences, and community members not only throughout the pandemic, but long into the future as well.

From March 16, 2020 - June 30, 2020, Gibney lost over $1.5M in earned revenue due to its mandated closure. In order to mitigate the financial losses, Gibney:

- Instituted an 80% salary and workweek for all employees beginning March 30
- Negotiated a 50% rental rate at 890 Broadway and enacted a force majeure clause on its lease at 280 Broadway
- Hired an operations reopening consultant to create a reopening plan with the highest safety precautions in mind
- Received extraordinary support in the amount of $250,000 from The New York Community Trust’s NYC COVID-19 Response & Impact Fund and $150,000 from the Howard Gilman Foundation
- Secured an initial Paycheck Protection Program loan and a Nonprofit Finance Fund loan
- Canceled its FY20 Annual Gala and, instead, launched a fundraising campaign to garner support

With persistence and innovation at the core, the Gibney team redesigned programs to thrive in the new digital sphere.

- Online Studio: Dance training for everyone, everywhere
- Online Digital Media Initiative: Digital media training for everyone, everywhere
- Online Repertory: Access to select excerpts of Gibney Company’s repertory
- Online Discourse & Engagement: Virtual long tables, screenings, and exhibits
- Online Art + Advocacy: Gibney’s Moving Toward Justice Cohort forged ahead digitally, along with the socially active projects of various artistic cohorts; Gibney Company’s Advocacy Fellowships offered mental health resources, developed socially distanced dance film, featured interviews with artists and arts workers, and more.
- Online Move to Move Beyond Workshops: Our teams continue to implement movement workshops with survivors across local domestic violence shelters digitally.
- Online Hands are for Holding: Moving Bodies + Moving Ideas: Pre-recorded and live versions of Gibney’s in-school dance meets violence prevention program are being offered to schools during this time of remote learning.
- Gibney Cares Podcast: Mindfulness centered ‘Take Care Card’ podcast series, born from decades of Gibney’s Community action work

- Artist Reach Out: Reflection-based interview series, made possible in partnership with Senior Curatorial Director, Eva Yaa Asantewaa of InfiniteBody
- COVID-19 Resource List: Gibney continues to serve as a resource for the field at large and is constantly updating its COVID-19 Resource List for peer organizations and independent artists as well as Survivors, Youth, and Schools
The Gibney team recognizes the tremendous responsibility and opportunity we have to support our community of BIPOC (Black, Indigenous, People of Color) artists, while also acknowledging the expectation that we show up with greater accountability, transparency, and sensitivity to the real needs of our colleagues.

In addition to taking the time for deep reflection, some of the work we are prioritizing includes:

- Investing in ongoing, year-round anti-racism training for our staff and Board of Directors
- Evaluating and transforming our internal decision-making processes and systems. A Promise Matrix is in development to enable us to focus on accountability measures in all conversations and contractual arrangements with artists, across the board in every part of the organization: Company, Community, and Center
- Restructuring our organization’s staffing to share decision-making and prioritize diversity in future key leadership positions
- Refining our hiring practices to recruit and retain a more inclusive staff and back them with financial resources
- Revising our Employee Handbook, welcoming input by all staff to the level they desire to be involved
- Encouraging all white-identifying staff to participate in Gibney’s Decentering Whiteness Working Group, a weekly meeting focusing on anti-racism education
- Redoubling our efforts to partner with Black and Brown communities across the work of our Company, Community, and Center — especially across Performances & Residencies, and Training
- Embarking upon a structured, organization-wide process of reflection in recognition that we must make anti-racism central to our work and name it as a core value
Gibney is incredibly grateful to the funding community and the many individual supporters for their unwavering dedication. Although FY20 was challenging, it is thanks to you that we have weathered this storm. Gibney looks forward to rebuilding and working to rebuild the field, together.
