THE STATE OF OUT-OF-SCHOOL TIME IN DALLAS

Most OST programs were physically open in some capacity this summer.

While many programs were open, 75% operated at reduced capacity with only 25% operating at pre-COVID capacity limits.

75% reported a waitlist.

Dallas OST programs offer a variety of supports to youth and families.

77% provide academic enrichment, physical activities, and opportunities for youth to talk about their feelings.

58% provide meals to families.

68% connect families with community resources.

42% report an increase in their cost-per-child.

A majority of these programs report an increase of more than 10%.

79% will offer fall programming.

Of those returning, 80% plan to serve students via in-person programming.

Concerns about students remain.

74% are concerned about student learning loss and a lack of opportunities for social connection.

84% are concerned about students’ mental and emotional health.

Providers are concerned about their programs, too.

60% are most concerned with being able to hire enough staff.

53% are still concerned about long-term funding and their program’s future.

The good news? Dallas Afterschool is here to help.

We’re building a new future for Out-of-School Time to ensure every child in Dallas has the opportunity to succeed.

Dallas Afterschool secured $75,000+ in funding for our partner programs last year to support safety and quality for students. We regularly share information on new funding streams. Our team hosts training sessions to assist OST partners with funding. Sessions include Fundraising 101, Grantwriting, Applying for PPP Funds, and Best Practices for Applications to United Way and Dallas ISD. We distribute in-kind items to partners several times a year to better support students. Examples include school supplies, PPE, technology, Wonder Kits® STEM activities, and social-emotional Calm Kits.

Dallas Afterschool mobilizes citizens and helps secure public funding so more students have access to safe, high quality OST.

We host a variety of virtual roundtable sessions on topics like Talking to Youth about COVID-19, How to Maximize your Virtual Learning Space, and Reopening Recommendations and Protocols.

Dallas Afterschool provides online safety and quality resources which have been downloaded over 17,000 times this past year.

We train afterschool professionals on a wide variety of topics related to health, safety, and quality, including those related to self-care for OST educators.

Our team advocates for the needs of students and makes policy recommendations at the state, city, and school district level with our Policy Brief (which also helps parents understand the importance of OST).

And so much more!
