Arts & Business Council of Greater Nashville Announces the 2020 Class of Periscope: Artist Entrepreneur Training

25 talented artists selected for the program's seventh year

NASHVILLE, TENN. – March 20, 2020 -- The Arts & Business Council of Greater Nashville proudly announces the selection of the 2020 class of Periscope: Artist Entrepreneur Training, an annual program that empowers working artists to see their creative practice through an entrepreneurial lens. This year's class consists of 25 artists working in an array of disciplines including visual art, photography, filmmaking, spoken word, music, dance, and more.

Artists are chosen for Periscope through a competitive application process and scored by a panel of community reviewers that includes leading artists, curators, musicians, and creative entrepreneurs in Nashville's arts, culture and business sectors. Selected artists participate in eight weeks of entrepreneurial training followed by six months of individualized mentorship by high-caliber business mentors. The program culminates at the Periscope Pitch + Artist Entrepreneur Showcase in September where artist entrepreneurs unveil their creative businesses to the community.

Previously, Periscope training sessions have only been offered in-person. With current public health recommendations to limit gatherings of 10 or more people, the Arts & Business Council pivoted to offering trainings online for at least the first three weeks of the eight-week training portion.

"With the many cancellations and closures happening every day, we're grateful to be able to fulfill the commitment we've made to these artists to help them achieve their goals," said Jill McMillan Palm, Executive Director of the Arts & Business Council. "I'm proud that our team was able to pivot so quickly, and we can provide an outlet for this year's Periscope cohort to learn, connect, and build community in new and exciting ways while keeping community safety top of mind."

"With so many of us practicing social distancing, something we should all be doing, we hope that bringing these artists together online will allow them to feel a sense of community even when we can't be together in person,” said Jonathan Harwell-Dye, Program Manager for the Arts & Business Council. “Most of all, we’re excited about the enthusiasm of this year’s class and their willingness to go on this digital adventure with us!”
