

ACTIVE DISCUSSIONS / NEWEST POSTS

CURBEDWIRE

Atlantic Yards Gets Artsy; Tenants Plan East Village Protest

EAST VILLAGE

PROSPECT HEIGHTS

COMMENTS

5:45 PM, OCT. 18 2011

Tweet

Like

ATLANTIC YARDSVILLE—The folks from Artbridge have been installing an art installation, "Works in Progress" on the Atlantic Yards construction fencing for the past two days. Curbed intern Jeremiah Budin headed to Brooklyn to spy on the art going up—check it out in the gallery above. The installation officially opens Thursday. [CurbedWire Staff]

REVENGE OF THE MEGAPROJECTS

Artists Try to Put a Good Face on Brooklyn's Arenafication

Friday, October 7, 2011, by Sara Polsky

PROSPECT HEIGHTS

ART

ARTBRIDGE

ATLANTIC YARDS

MEGAPROJECTS

REVENGE OF THE

MEGAPROJECTS

COMMENTS

Like 5

The Artbridge scaffolding art project already saved us from the terrifying scaffolding at London Terrace, and now it plans to take on a bigger construction site nightmare: Atlantic Yards. Back in June, the organization solicited entries from Brooklyn-based artists, specifically seeking "visual works that riff on, reveal, or reference the artistic process." Artbridge has chosen 20 artists whose work will cover close to 2,500 square feet of Atlantic Yards construction fencing. The installation, which goes up October 17, is fittingly called "Works in Progress." But when it comes to Atlantic Yards, is any amount of beautification enough?