

About CIMT Camp:...The Constraint Induced Movement Therapy (CIMT) camp at Crossway Pediatric Therapy has been taking place annually since 2009. We use an evidence-based practice to address neuromotor involvement. In addition to summer CIMT camp, Crossway also offers intensive CIMT for children 1:1 outside of camp. We use evidence-based contemporary approaches to treat neuromotor involvement: hemiparesis secondary to stroke.

CIMT is the application of the restraint or cast to the less affected arm for 24 hours a day for 7 days a week for 90 hours coupled with therapy of shaping and no additional interventions.

Crossway has demonstrated Pediatric CIMT or pCIMT can be effective with a smaller dosage and has created a program for only $3000 for pCIMT. Pediatric constraint induced movement therapy of casting the less affected arm for 24 hours a day for 3-5 weeks for a total of 45-60 hours of therapy with the implementation of shaping and collective evidence-based practices for individual intensive therapy.

The family is typically involved during the intensives for the individualized or camp setting so that they can see what our practices are and can adopt them at home. It is also an excellent way to meet other families and other children. Some parents follow the child throughout the session and others volunteer to help with the camp to not distract their child. We also have parents that drop off and pick up. Any of the following is acceptable as long it yields the best therapeutic value. Families who attend the CIMT intensives at for either camp or individualized intensives also see specialists such as the orthotist, physiatrist, or optometrist during his or her attendance hours to determine if there any additional treatments that could be effective to the total program.

The cost of the intensive is $3000 for the three weeks of therapy, 3 hours a day for 15 days. At the end of the intensive, the child goes home with the day cast and home program in hopes the programming will continue at home.
