About the FIFHM

The Montreal International History Film Festival is organized by Richard D. Lavoie, filmmaker, Éliane Bélec, historian and Mathieu Trépanier, historian - sharing their passion about the representation of history in film. The Festival's aim is to promote exchanges between filmmakers, historians and the general public, offering a showcase of films of any genre or other media products (especially television series or, eventually, video games) where history is presented and represented. During its first edition, the event welcomed cinephiles of all ages to share this passion. On its second edition, the festival will award two prizes, one for the best feature film and one for the best short film.
